HICKEY HAS HONORS; HORSESHOE HALL HIGHNESS; HA!

Representative from South Boston, You Know, in Class With Kink of England.

Representative "Bill" Hickey of South Boston has stepped into the Honorable Hall of Fame. (Is that going funny?) It is. The Honorable Hall of Fame was created by Charles Grosvenor, the Marlborough, Pa. blacksmith, who was one of the best of the world. There are a few in town who have been in the Honorable Hall of Fame. Hickey is the only one from South Boston. Hickey is the only one from South Boston. Hickey is the only one from South Boston.

PROMINENT ODD FELLOW SAVED FROM CATARRH, CURED BY PE-RU-NA

Mr. George Barrett, of the North End Lodge, No. 135, Independent Order Odd Fellows, Gloucester, Ontario, writes: "I have been using Peru for some time for a cough and catarrh of the throat with very satisfactory results. Having neglected the cough, catarrh, and my physician said I was threatened with catarrh of the stomach. My breath was very offensive, and I was troubled with nausea. Less than two bottles of Peru cured me."—Mr. George Barrett.

"MUST HAVE HARMONY" SO MAYOR GOES TO WAR WITH AXE

Fitz Astounded That "Discordant Relations" Brigade Hasn't Resigned Before.

THE HATCHET MEN.

GET the good and honest, boys, we've had a little fun. Swing it as hard as you can in every way you can.

Swing it on the wheel back of every one who has been working against us. Hurray! Hurray! We have a jubilee Hurray! Hurray! The voters made us so.

To give the opposition what it didn't quite deserve. When it was working against us.

SWING the good old hatchet, boys, and down with "Sunny Jim".

Anyone was foolish, then down with friends of his. Swing the hatchet, swing it wide, and swing it with a vengeance.

Swing on those working against us. Hurray! Hurray! The things were going so well.

Will Hickey was the author of our famous flag in blue. Hurray! Hurray! The things were going so well.

A Few of the S. & H. Premiums You Get FREE With ONE Book of Stamps

Thousands of new collectors are adopting the S. & H. Green Stamp every week, having found, on investigation, that it is the most valuable trading stamp in existence. But the number is small compared with the number that WOULD be added if they only knew how easily and quickly a book of S. & H. Stamps can be filled. $3 worth of groceries a week will fill 5 books in a year and give you 5 premiums like illustrations WITHOUT COST. Besides, there's all the wearing apparel and home furnishings to buy. For other premiums given with one or more books, visit our Premium Parlor on the 5th floor, adjoining our grocery dept. Hundreds of stores in and around Boston now give the S. & H. Green Stamp—growing in popularity every day.

Sizes 34 to 44 for Women and 14, 16 and 18 Years for Misses and Small Women

A remarkable value-giving opportunity to buy one of the smartest suits ever exhibited in Boston at less than wholesale. Other stores positively pay more for such suits in quantities than we ask you to pay for one single suit. The reasons are obvious. We make enormous contracts with the leading designers for our four stores, and our United Purchasing Power attends to the price. We buy cheaper than our competitors—and that's the secret of the superior values we're so well known for.

Style, though, is the main point with the critical New England trade. If an article is not stylish you cannot sell it for any price. No other store in this country pays so much attention to style as we. This accounts for our supremacy in Wearing Apparel, Millinery, etc., and the many favorable expressions heard during the opening last week.

The unusual style of these Tailored Suits would sell every one before Easter at $25. But we want to set the whole country round talking about this sale and this store, and we're going to have a surprise ready Monday morning that will make every woman eager for Monday morning to come. Real $25.00 Suits $16.75.

The Materials are: Imported Serges, Shepherd Plaids, Chiffon Panamas, Imported Cheviots, Vigorous Cloths.

The Linings are: Beautiful Silk, Serges and Soft Peau de Cygnes.

Second Floor.

These Suits are, really in the class with the finest $35 and $40 tailor-made garments. It is a shame to sell them for $16.75. Read the description through carefully if you don't read anything else today, and if you don't make up your mind to come quickly for one of these suits some wiser women will get the one intended for you. Real $25 Suits $16.75.

The Skirts are: Tunic or Extra Full 19-Cone Plaited.

The Colors are: Blue, Rose, Violet, Bronze, Gray, in the latest and most effective shades. Also Navy and Black.

The reason for this sale is a concession to business sentiment and consists of an annual celebration on a commercial basis of the year this business started.
Three of our present windows occupy the entire frontage of the first shop.
From that little crowded shop Filene's has grown to be the most complete clothing house in the world for Women, Misses, Girls and Infants.
We have grown rapidly but solidly on safe, sane, conservative principles of merchandising and the best service to the public.
Each year it is a substantial growth in our business.
The Anniversary is the Sale occasion which we take to test this growth and the efficiency of our organization.
The Sale Ends Monday at 5:30 P. M.
If any lot is not sold and cannot be duplicated, we will substitute an equal value or take orders for lot to lot.

GEORGE P. CLEAVES DEAD.

Past Grand Secretary of New Hampshire Masons.

HAVE KILLED. March 12.—George P. Cassin, one of the most prominent Masons in New England, died to day at his home.

N. 126 High street, after an illness of five days. He came to this country in 1903 from Portland, Me. He is survived by his wife, Grace. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon and the remains will be taken to Concord, N. H., for interment. He was a 25th degree Mason and past grand of the N. W. New Hampshire grand lodge.

Boy Under Burning Sofa.

He has buried under a burning sofa. Mrs. Mary Ann Ankus, of No. 88 St. George street, has been informed that her 11-year-old son, William, had been lying under a sofa in the front room of the apartment when the ball rolled under a cushion. He climbed under after it and litged a match to help him. The fire caught fast.

Characters: He and She.

HE (to the point)—What'll you have?
SHE (happily)—I don't know—what are you going to take?
HE (without pause)—Aw! (Ham and eggs, I guess, or maybe beef-steak—they give you a lot! But you take what you want—there ain't nothin' in this place too good for you!)
SHE (with lowered lids)—Oh, you?
HE (retreating to the point)—Well, what a ver coin' to have?
SHE (timidly)—I just love chicken salad!
HE (to waitress)—One beef-steak, one chicken salad and a couple of coffees with a little brandy let in!
SHE (in admiration)—What does that mean—"A little light let in"?
HE (caustic)—With milk. "Thaw one in the dark" means without milk. Ain't you on to the lines of these points yet?
SHE (amazed)—I think this is a grand place! I never go to no restaurant at all—I take my lunch to work.
(Waitress stands aside before them with good-looking and no frills)
HE (settling down)—Good! It's fine, ain't it?
SHE (with expression)—Sure, it's grand!
HE (seriously)—You're a Jim dandy to take out—you always know how to enjoy yourself. Why, some girls ain't never satisfied no matter what you blow 'em to! Last Saturday night I took Rosale McGraw to that six-cent Bretonian place—it's a swell place with wine and a lot of queer stuff to eat what you don't know what it is, and after she had stored it all away under her belt she said it didn't remind her nothin' of the Parnass Hotel!
SHE (with much awe)—Aw! What does she know about the Parnass—she ain't never had a bit in her life! What ever men than a dollar and a quarter, but she's always talkin' about willow plumes!
HE—She's a big bug!
SHE (promptly)—Worse'n that!
HE (seriously)—Say, do you ever think of gettin' hitched?
SHE (with her eyes on the "meat" chicken)—Of course not—why would I?
HE (frankly)—Well, you're old enough to travel in harness!
SHE (indignantly)—LOOK much older than I am!
HE (looking at her)—You've got me for a fool—I was only jokin', girlie—I think you're all to the rump!
(She blushes vividly and looks coquettishly with a piece of lamp lit face left).
HE (bravely)—You're the kind of a side partner I want—what do you think?
SHE (innocently)—I make six a week, but my number says she won't let me work for no man!
HE (grudgingly)—No wife of mine would have to work!
SHE (looking at her)—She'd have to make by, if you didn't bring in enough coin on Saturday night.
HE (telling her the trap)—Well, guess twenty per week is enough to keep a little fat in South Boston bay.
SHE (with feigned amazement)—You ain't making that much, are you?
HE (with expanded chest)—That's the contents of my envelope. It's pretty good, ain't it?
SHE (enthusiastically)—I should say so!
HE (to her)—You think me all right, now?
SHE—No, indeed!
HE—Then it's a no?
SHE (thoroughly stung)—Sure!
HE (sighing, in address)—Give me a couple of stacks of what comes with lots of coin on the side! An I'll be there! And two Charlotte Tonnes!
SHE (tender)—Oh, you're so extravagant!

Scene: The Lobsterette Cafe.
Time: 7:30 P. M.
Characters: He and She.

HE—Do you like this place?
SHE (with eyes)—No, stick down to the ground! I wouldn't give you five cents for a lot of hot air and phony gilt trimmings: the stuff on the plate is what I care for!
HE (looking at her address)—So do I! I'm so glad you're not the other girls. All the girls I know go to a place because it's the rage—they don't give a snap for the food—just like to rubber at the other dips.
SHE (sincerely)—Society dinner? I suppose!
HE (rejoicing)—I'm afraid that's what you call them. It takes a girl like you who has worked for her living to appreciate things.
SHE (treating with a retreating puff)—Sure thing; I've known what it is to work!
HE (sincerely)—Well, we won't stick about that now. What will you have to eat?
SHE (sighing)—Just begin at the top for me and travel to the end of the line, and if there's a couple of way stations on the route don't hesitate to stop at them.
HE (laughing appreciatively)—You're a treat, really you are!
SHE (laconically)—Thanks!
HE (picking up a wine card)—What wine do you prefer?
SHE—Pass it up! Wine and me aren't very thick. I'll have a pitcher of cream ale and after that, maybe another!
HE (admiringly)—My, you're a sensible girl!
SHE (munching some celery)—Yes, ain't I?
(She gives order to waiter, then looks confidentially toward her peer the table.)
HE—I took Miss Everard to supper after the show last night—she's very blue, isn't she?
SHE—I guess that's it, but it's a new way of saying it. She's a "blue," she is! Why, her mother used to be a scrubwoman in the Fire-side Insurance Company Building. Then one day some plummy music teacher discovered "Daughter's" voice, and now she doesn't know a scrubbing brush from a feather duster!
HE (grinning much)—That's put on business doesn't appeal to me at all. I like some one like you—a woman who tells the truth beautifully and stylish.
SHE (with an upward smile)—Put your foot on the soft, soft pedal, dear. The old whipper-snapper at the next table is "on!"
HE (caustic)—Wouldn't you like to leave the stage?
SHE (shrilling)—What, me? How I ever got my living, kid?
HE (looking with admiration)—Just be my wife, sweetheart!
SHE (sighing)—Nix on the foolishness, now!
HE (sincerely)—I mean it—I'm sick of these society girls. I want a real woman for my wife.
SHE (looking up)—You come from Pittsburgh, don't you?
HE (puzzled)—Yes, why?
SHE—Well, I was just thinking that some of them Pittsburgh millionaires are about as strong as the city itself—laid, dry, not the real thing—you know what I mean.
HE (sincerely)—My fortune is real enough. I've got sixty thousand a year now and when my father dies I'll have some more. (Takes a paper from under the table.) Here's a letter of credit on a New York bank for ten thousand.
SHE (taking a quick breath)—It looks like heaven!
HE (looking at her hand under the table)—How about leaving the stage?
SHE (sighing)—You're yours, honey, just lead me to the lobster bureau.

Scene: Haute Noblesse Cafe.
Time: 7:30 P. M.
Characters: He and She.

HE (looking around)—It doesn't look like the same place somehow.
SHE (in bored tone)—The place is deteriorating—a sightseer's paradise!
HE (travelling her through monotonous)—You are looking extremely well this evening.
SHE (travelling her through monotonous)—Do you really think so? My mollie made a mess of this gown. I thought I was looking unusually shoddy.
HE (stifling a gasp)—Quite to the contrary. Salmon pink is your color. It throws your hair into relief.
SHE (smiling slightly)—My dear man, do not say salmon pink. It sounds so er—er, baby, don't you know. This shade is called "rose breath."
HE (picking up menu, which is a fast long and (loudly grating)—My word—nothing new! Can't some one get up a novel dish once in a while—are we doomed to eat the same things for the rest of our lives?
SHE (sincerely)—I suppose so. I do wish Luther Burbank would try his hand at inventing an interesting animal, so that we could have a different meat occasionally.
(They finally decide after fifteen minutes what they are to eat and give the order to the waiter).
HE (over the waiter)—Rosamond was quite the belle of the ball last night.
SHE (sincerely)—You can tell what Boston society is coming to when a girl of Rosamond Jordell's family can question it at an affair like that. They tell me that Mr. Jordell's family used to run a bucket shop. I really haven't the exact idea of what a bucket shop is, but it must be something dreadful!
HE (sighing his address)—I have heard of them, er—er, they are called poolrooms sometimes, I believe. Miss Rosamond is too buxom a type for my taste. I would rather have, er—er—
SHE (holding her head in apponment)—Exactly, so should I.
HE (thoughtfully)—Society is becoming mercenary.
SHE (emphatically)—It is becoming. It has become. A family tree now days is torn up by the roots by the first tornado of new-made gold that happens to strike it.
HE (brilliantly)—Ah! but how can we employ a gardener to take care of the family tree without the gold, ha, ha!
SHE (trying to smile)—Very clever! True—money is a necessary vulgarity.
HE (tentatively)—Money—any quantity of money—would never affect you, would it?
SHE (sincerely)—Never—it means nothing to me.
HE (with a half patronizing manner)—You have always attracted me from the first. (Takes a free spoonful of soup). You are different, I think from the rest.
SHE (trembling at an offer)—Really? How sweet of you to say it!
HE (without order)—Yes, I have always thought that when I made up my mind I'd make you my wife.
SHE (without agitation)—A diamond of the first water needs an expensive setting.
HE—I think I can furnish a setting appropriate to the rarest gem.
SHE (very quietly)—Amalgamated Trust must have gone up.
HE (looking at her tentatively)—It has.
SHE (smiling sweetly)—Well, then—
HE (sincerely)—Well, then—
SHE (raising a glass)—The diamond is waiting for the setting.

THE NEWEST JOKES BY THE COMEDIANS

WENT into a dentist's and asked how much he would charge to pull a tooth that was aching. "Two dollars," he replied.
"That's too much," he replied.
The dentist said he would pull two teeth for three dollars, and I told him to go ahead.
WHEN I got married it was a runaway match. I ran away and my wife ran after me. She said my wife—what you call it—broader of promises. The judge made me give her $10,000, and I had to marry her to get my money back.
MY boy brother got married last night. Through a marriage broker he got him a fine girl with a dowry of $2,500.
"Do you take this woman for better or worse?" says the minister.
"I take her for $2,500—not a cent less," says the bride.
FOR why do I feel sad? I'll tell you:
A friend of mine had owed me ten dollars for two years. Yesterday he was coming up to my house to pay me. While walking along the street with the ten dollars in his pockets a brick fell off a new building and hit him on the head.
Now, I don't care because the brick hit him, but doctor says he'll lose his memory!
WHY do you refuse to go into that saloon just now?" asked Jacobson of his prospective son-in-law, "because you knew it was wrong to take a drink?"
"No, because it was my turn to treat."

LEVY was in a drug store when Goddard came in and said:
"Have a drink of soda water, Levy."
"I don't care for none," said Levy.
"Oh, take some."
"I don't want no soda water."
"Well, take something else, then."
"All right," Levy replied, "I'll take five posts."
LEVY and Phokelstein are both good friends of mine, but they aren't on speaking terms with each other. I took Phokelstein out to lunch, and he ordered some alphabet soup, but when it was served he never touched it. I asked him why he didn't eat his soup, and he said:
"Oh, I've lost my appetite. I just saw Levy's name in there."
EVERY night a fellow comes by my house to see my daughter. He sits down at the piano and sings a song called "I Lay the Whole World at Your Feet." I ask him how he expects to do it on six dollars a week.
Then he sings about ten times another song called "I'm afraid to Go Home in the Dark." Sure he's afraid to go home in the dark. Ever since he's been coming up to my house my gas bills have been tremendous.
I JUST moved into Mrs. Rosenheim's apartments, but you bet you my life I had them rooms disinfectated before I moved in. You see, Mrs. Rosenheim had twice there twice and I didn't want to take any chances.

JOE WELCH,
The Popular Dialect Comedian.

MY wife said if I would let her go to Atlantic City she would promise to dream of me every night. I told her to stay home and dream she's in Atlantic City.
WAS a boarder. He said he wanted to live in a private family the worst way, and I told him to stay with us.
That man looked so lonesome. I asked him if he didn't have any friends, and he said, "No, only relatives."
But I don't like him any more. When he came he asked me how much I would charge him, and I told him to pay what it was worth. He's been there three months already and hasn't paid a cent.
My wife likes him all right, though. She says he's not such taking ways. He's got 'em, too. If I don't go before he does, he takes my clothes.
And another thing I don't like—he's around the house so much that when my wife tells the children to go to papa they all run to him.
MY son's a leading man in a theatre. He leads a horse across the stage and back again every night.
SOMEBODY asked Abe how he managed to buy coal when it was so high. He replied that he never bought any coal.
"I go out in the railroad yards," he said, "and make faces at the engineers. In a couple hours they follow throv enough coal at me to last maybe a week."

MY brother got a job as driver for a lamp chimney firm. The first day his boss sent him out with a big load of lamp chimneys. He had none only a few blocks when he collided with a street car, the wagon was overturned and every chimney was broken.
You never saw anybody feel so sad as my brother did. He just stood there and cried to think of his hard work. While he was weeping, a kind-hearted old gardener approached him and said:
"Young man, will you have to say for all those broken chimneys?"
"Yes, I suppose I will," my brother replied.
"Well," said the old gardener, "I will help you out." He took off his hat, put a ten-dollar bill in it, and then passed the hat through the crowd that had collected. Pretty soon he came back and gave my brother a handful of bills and silver.
My brother thanked him and took the money back to his boss, expecting to be fired at once. But Mr. Finckelstein did not fire him. Instead, he counted the money over twice, showed it carefully in his pocket book and then said with a pleased smile:
"They, you're the best driver we ever had. You've sold those chimneys for twenty per cent above the market price. Take out another load tomorrow and don't come back till you've collided with a car."
FELLOW in a Turkish bath told me he charged a dollar for a bath. When I told him that was too much he said he'd sell me twelve tickets for ten dollars. But I wouldn't do it. How did I know I'd live twelve years?

And even then I wouldn't get up unless I felt like it. My French maid would bring me hot chocolate and letters, and while I read my marriage proposals from millionaires and counts my maid could put on my silk stockings—and gradually, without my hurry, she could dress me, and I'd float gracefully down to the green and blue drawing room to receive callers. No alarm clock, no snooze!

story on the Spectator's Camp in the most perilous woods of Maine, are from the same notes, the real plot being a business man's plan to reach a city by a new route, through a difficult country, and to do this by sending a party of men, including a doctor, around a couple of weeks in a blue outfit and canvas boots. You arrive at Atlantic City, and the captain, and everybody is looking for the doctor around every corner. Oh, rats! You can't find him, but you're with him.

that she thought)—I always think that purple—or violet—is so trying to anybody with a willow. SHE SALERADY (in a shocked tone)—Without doubt. But in a man's complexion that color could wear anything. SHE It is a color in her skin plus an oriental touch. It is perfectly legitimate.

MRS. SMITHERS (collegially)—I don't know but what my complexion is as good as every people's, and but what I can wear is as good as the people can.

SALERADY (still murmuring in her tone of admiration)—A dream! Perfect dream! Lovely! Ravalli.

MRS. SMITHERS (gliding under the lamp-light again, but making no acknowledgment of the compliment)—But, madam, from the island that do you think? Does the shape suit my face? Give me your best opinion, my dear

MRS. BROWNLEE (staring into her own hand)—And conscience!—Don't you think—that is a little too young for me?

SALESLADY—Too young for whom? Why, this hat would be perfectly appropriate for anybody. It is—they are thirty-five years old.

MRS. SMITHS (who will never be forgiven again)—Of course, people who are slender do look a great deal younger than those of the same age who are stout. I always say that nothing is so ageing as fat.

MRS. BROWNLEE (bravely)—Well, I don't know that where SALESWOMAN (sighing)—What you like a face and a figure like madame's?—Woman who attracts attention wherever she goes—she cannot afford to wear a dowdy, commonplace little hat. It is a jarring note. But this velvet collection, so elegant, so artistic, so chic—the effect is superb! It is a perfect harmony between hat and wearer.

MRS. BROWNLEE (gathering up her bag and gloves in haste and hurrying to her door)—Oh, let yourself be soiled in getting a hat that makes you look like a figure of fun if you want to. I don't care.

MRS. SMITHERS (thrusts)—Cut!

MRS. BROWNLEE (bumping the door behind her)—That's what you get for trying to keep a friend from making a fool of herself.

SALESWOMAN (smiling an answer, but not to her)—Thank you, madame, and thank I send the hat C. O. D. b? Only sixty-five dollars. A bargain, madame!

GREED-THE ENEMY OF ALL MANKIND

The Perverted Ambition That Brings Or Keeps Most of the Trouble and Sorrow In the World.

It has been said that selfishness is responsible for all human ills and sorrows. Yet men are born selfish. A certain amount of it is necessary to their existence. Were a man utterly unselfish, free from any desire to gain money or reputation, he would soon fall an easy prey to the selfish creatures that want to monopolize both. Either a man must fight for his rights, or somebody else must do it for him. In the case of Americans their most precious right—liberty—was won for them by their great-great-grandfathers. But even so, most of them find it necessary to do a little fighting now and then, both for themselves and their children. They must be selfish to the extent that they will not be imposed upon, or all the good that was accomplished by the Revolutionary War will be destroyed.

But selfishness may easily become a habit, and a bad habit. From a habit it may grow to a passion—a perverted ambition which will convert a once well-meaning human being into a predatory, inhuman monster. That kind of selfishness is known as GREED—and if you will take the trouble to think about it a little, you will discover that it is directly responsible for most of the sorrow and trouble that is in the world.

When it is merely an individual who is greedy the harm he can do is in proportion to his importance. When greed is incorporated it can do vast damage, for then the individual responsibility is lessened, and it is harder for the victims to get redress.

To a right-minded man it would be unthinkable that a company of human beings would band together for the purpose of selling poisonous and adulterated food. Yet it has been necessary for the Congress of the United States to pass a law protecting the citizens against this very thing. It might be still more effective than it is, but it is a wise and good measure, and it is only the greedy rascals who want to make and sell bad food who are trying to have it modified.

For an individual dealer or manufacturer to sell poisoned food would prove pretty serious business. Supposing for example that the rotten beef sold to the soldiers in the Spanish war could have been traced to one man, some little grocer or sausage manufacturer. You can easily imagine his speedy trial and severe punishment.

But that greed happened to be incorporated. The net result of the exposure was a row between the ranking General of the army and the Quartermaster-General, a row which nobody appeared to understand or to care anything about.

Moreover, that offense, which ought to have brought everybody concerned a long sentence in the penitentiary, by no means stopped the making and the sale of food that is unfit to eat.

Ask a doctor who practices in the tenement district of a large city what he thinks of some of the food that is sold to the poor. He will tell you that a great deal of it is of about as much nutritive value as so much sawdust, while some of it is actually poisonous. And yet, despite the pure food law, bad provisions continue to be sold, and somebody's greed is fattened by their sale.

You would think a man who made a profit by insuring the lives of babies and then killing them to get the insurance possessed a form of diabolical cruelty that ought to send him to an asylum or a place of still safer keeping. But his kind of cruelty is certainly no worse than that of the greed-crazed purveyor of foods that bring sickness and death in their wake.

It is always the poor, who are poor because they are unfortunate or helpless, who suffer from the greed that possesses their despoilers. There is not a filthy, unwholesome tenement in New York or any other great city whose condition is not due to the cruel rapacity of its owner.

Of this sort of thing there is a shining example in New York City. A great church corporation, which was established by earnest Christian men, owns great blocks of real estate, upon which stand many tenement houses. In their zeal for the present gain and glory of the church they serve the managers of this corporation have gone a little further in the matter of greed than have any other tenement owners in the city.

The tenements standing upon church property are notorious for their rotten, dangerous condition. Again and again this has been pointed out to the directors of the corporation; one newspaper after another has printed pictures of the ramshackle rookeries where families are housed in reeking squalor, and yet directors, unmoved by all the turmoil, continue to keep things as they are, quieting their consciences—if they have any—with the reflection that they are doing well by their church.

Fine business that for a church to be in! All the charities that its rectors and almoners may dispense can never atone for the evil that is done by those wretched tenements. All the pious and good intentions of the many worthy people who worship in the church and its various chapels will make no amends for the sickness that breeds in the dirty, dark rooms and the misery that such sickness entails upon those whose necessity forces them to live there.

Here, completely gone to waste, is perhaps the most glorious opportunity that ever came to a religious organization.

To build block after block of model, cheap, clean tenement houses, as an example for all other tenement owners and as a means of bettering the condition of thousands of people that would be a worthy work of a church, worthy of the founder of the religion professed by those who worship in this particular congregation.

But the greed of a little company of directors for gain, in which they do not share, has kept the church out of its opportunity, and instead of the respect of men has brought it only infamy.

From time to time the whole country is shocked by the news of some great calamity, like the New York Central tunnel disaster or the Slocum disaster.

When the former happened the tunnel was badly lighted. Parsimony had prevented the directors of the road from an electric installation since forced by popular opinion.

Everybody knows the story of the Slocum's destruction—the rotten hose, bought to save money; the worthless life-preservers, bought to save money; the green deckhands, employed to save money; the worthless inspection which made all those things possible. If ever there was an example of greed it was in that particular instance. The result of that crime was the sending to the penitentiary of one aged captain, whose worst fault was that he lost his head and did not do what a younger and cooler headed man might have done to land his passengers.

The greed behind it all remained unpunished. There are men to-day enjoying perfect freedom and abundant prosperity who ought to be in the penitentiary for that horror. But greed knows how to protect itself. They managed to escape the consequences, and to-day would be highly indignant if any one told them that they are responsible for the cruel and needless deaths of more than a thousand women and children.

It may be said that there is room for argument about monopolies. But there is certainly no room for argument about incorporated greed which makes its profit out of the lives of human beings.

The packer who charges thirty cents a pound for beef may not deserve to go to the penitentiary—if he is selling good beef. But the man who sells diseased beef at any price has no excuses that decent men should listen to.

One man who was to blame for robbing the poor when the ice trust was at the height of its power has gone to prison, although for another offense. He found it difficult to get sympathy, although he had restored the money he stole. People remembered his Ice Trust.

There will come a day when greed of that kind will be impossible. People will endure being robbed. When greedy scoundrels begin poisoning them it is different.

The rapacity of a milk concern which sells typhoid-laden milk rather than throw it away will be checked some day in a way which will be long remembered by everybody in the milk business who is tempted to do the same sort of thing.

Do your best to help along the approach of that day. In the meantime if you find that your own particular form of selfishness has a tendency to run to greed, look out. Let that passion once get hold of you and you will never again have the right to look honest men in the face. For once greed has him in its grip, there is no crime to which a man will stoop in order that it may be fed.

IRISH CLUBS OUT FOR J. J. O'HARE

Central Council Ask. Myer to Make Him Library
Trustee.

THE meeting of the Central Council of the Irish Clubs, held on March 18, was one of the most important of the season.
The council discussed the question of making J. J. O'Hare

THE MASSACRE OF THE INNOCENTS BY ORDER OF KING HEROD

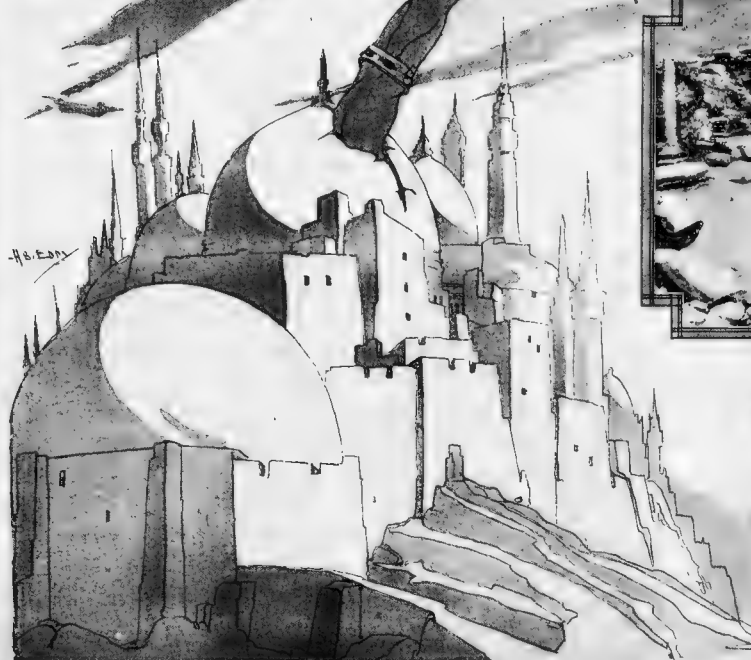

KING HEROD.

Ruins of King Herod's Palace Found.

Bible Students Unearth the Crumbling Walls that Sheltered the Wicked Ruler of Judea who Ordered the Cruel Massacre of the Innocents in His Effort to Slay the Saviour.

RUINS OF THE PALACE OF CRUEL KING HEROD.

THE ruins have been discovered of the palace of Herod the Great, the author of the Massacre of the Innocents, and perhaps the most wicked and sanguinary monster of all history.

They are situated upon a hill, two miles south of the site of Jericho, that remarkable ancient city of the Canaanites, whose fall before the invading Israelites is one of the most dramatic events recorded in the Old Testament.

Herod the Great was the last King of Judea. His family rose to power in Palestine with the support of Julius Caesar, and he himself reached the height of his power and glory after Augustus Caesar had defeated Mark Antony and become the head of the Roman world. Herod was King under the Roman Empire.

In early life he impressed everybody by his beauty, the majesty of his bearing and the splendor of his raiment. His greatest work was the rebuilding of the temple at Jerusalem, which he carried out with the most scrupulous care and with vast labor and expense. Of his reconstruction it is said that the Temple was "built in forty and six years." (St. John, II, 20.) Herod also built a new and splendid palace on the site of David's strong hold at Jerusalem.

The city of Jericho became a centre of commerce, a place of great wealth and splendor under Herod. It was, in fact, a miniature Rome. It was filled with palaces, arenas and hippodromes. Herod himself built the greatest palace of all on a commanding situation south of the city. This is the palace of which the ruins have just been discovered by the archaeologists of the Gorman Oriental Society, who have been carrying on very interesting work in this region.

The ruins show that the palace was of vast extent, possessed a hall one hundred feet long by fifty feet wide, in which Herod held banquets and festivals, and one hundred subterranean cells, in which prisoners were doubtless immured.

ALTIMAN says that a "wild" and "uncontrolled" sea would lead to the "collapse of the world's economy," and that the "major loss" at a nuclear war would be "the loss of the sea." He adds that the "sea is our last hope."

It is true that a nuclear war would destroy the world's oceans, as well as its rivers, lakes, and forests. But the sea is a source of food, and a source of energy. It is the source of the world's fish, and the source of the world's oil. It is the source of the world's wind, and the source of the world's waves. It is the source of the world's life, and the source of the world's death.

The feasibility of sailing easily over frozen surfaces of rivers and lakes would also appear as if it were a possibility. But the sea is a source of food, and a source of energy. It is the source of the world's fish, and the source of the world's oil. It is the source of the world's wind, and the source of the world's waves. It is the source of the world's life, and the source of the world's death.

Pictorial Panorama of Bible Scenes of To-Day

Why Moses Was Not An Israelite.

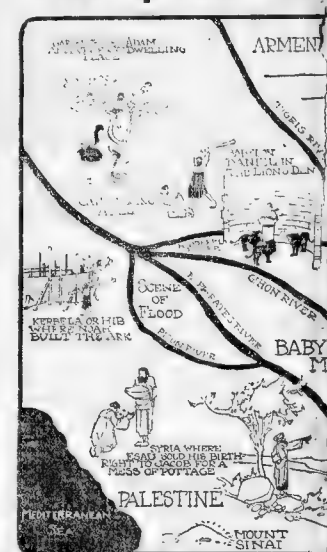

By Professor Paul Haupt,
Professor of Semitic Languages in Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore.

THE Jewish philosopher Philo of Alexandria, who lived in the first century of our era, was a Jew, and yet he was not an Israelite. He was a Hellenist, and he was a Greek. He was a man of letters, and he was a man of power. He was a man who had seen the world, and he was a man who had seen the East. He was a man who had seen the Jews, and he was a man who had seen the Greeks. He was a man who had seen the world, and he was a man who had seen the East. New Discoveries In Vast Irrigation Babylon and Nineveh Garden of Eden of Mesopotamia Blo

Pictorial Map of the Region to Be Irrigated, Showing Some of the Events That Happened

Reviving Babylon's Glories by Irrigation.

By Sir William Willcocks, K. C. M. G.

Director of Irrigation in Mesopotamia.

THE city of Babylon, which was once the greatest city of the world, is now a ruin. It is a city of mud and brick, and it is a city of decay. It is a city that has been forgotten, and it is a city that has been abandoned. It is a city that has been left to the winds and the waves, and it is a city that has been left to the hands of the enemy.

Open-Air Playgrounds, Open-Air Hospitals, Open-Air Gymnasiums and Now Open-Air Schools to Keep Children Well and Happy.

The new movement for open-air schools is a natural outgrowth of the open-air playgrounds, open-air hospitals, and open-air gymnasiums. It is a movement for the betterment of the child, for the child is the future of the nation. The child is the most precious possession of the nation, and it is the duty of the nation to see that the child is well and happy. Does Matrimony Change the Voice?

"You know, I have been married for some time, and I have noticed that my voice has changed. It is not the same as it was before. It is a different voice, and it is a better voice. It is a different voice, and it is a better voice. It is a different voice, and it is a better voice.

MME. CAVALIERI'S topic to-day is one that interests all women. After the fear of old age the fear of fat is the bogie of beauty. Women who are fat want to become thin. Women who are thin fear they may become fat. Every new method for reducing superfluous flesh is eagerly sought. Mme. Cavalieri gives her readers the benefit of the latest methods and her opinion of their value.

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

It is his opinion that the corset is all very well in its way, as far as it goes, but that it does not go far enough. The Paris corsetiere has undertaken to supply this need. He has extended the corset to the ankles.

To the ordinary long corset, which reaches slightly below the hips, the inventive Parisian has attached a pair of close-fitting buckram drawers. The stout American visiting Paris is taken to the corsetiere and says, "In order, a corset is built especially for her and the buckram drawers are made to fit her. They are most like knickerbockers, being shaped well to the leg and tapering to the ankle. To assure one that comes to me far more consistently, is already in vogue in this country. We note it in the Turkish and Italian bath, and friends whom we meet striding in the teeth of blizzards in the daily train on the avenue whisper to us that they have adopted it.

When rubber garments were first manufactured they were made in the form of a suit. When worn they were like walking and at the Turkish bath and gave loud testimonials of their efficacy in causing perspiration. Perspiration is, of course, a fat reducer.

But in time the enthusiasm for these suits diminished. Unquestionably they reduced the flesh, but they reduced for her daily walk and every time she made her weekly or semi-weekly visit to the Turkish bath. She put on the trousers first when she dressed for the walk. Over them she drew woolen tights, a close flannel petticoat and her heavy walking suit of English serge. "I never wear shoes," she said. "I have placed" as a physical instructor advised "What's the use of deep breathing on the lower East Side?" he asked sentimentally. "Breathe deeply as you go through the park or when you cross one of the East River bridges, not in a North River tunnel." She never stopped in her daily walk, because she knew to loiter about a lunch or tea-room would You inhale greater quantities of oxygen given time. In an hour's time four times the quantity of air you inhale in an hour's time.
